

Planning and delivery of family learning with museums, libraries and archives (MLAs)

Times: Start/End 10:00am - 3:00pm

Region	Date	Venue
London	Wednesday 23 June 2010	3 Corners, Northampton Road, London EC1R 0HU

Background

As part of the Learning Revolution MLA is funding regional training courses to increase understanding of the key features of family learning and their relationship with museums, libraries and archives within local authorities.

Over 3,000 museums, libraries and archives have pledged their support for the new informal adult learning movement set out in the Learning Revolution White Paper. This represents a tremendous commitment to support adults to learn throughout life. The research is now clear about the benefits of family learning for both adult and child and its significance in strengthening family life.

Aims

To increase understanding of the key features of family learning and their relationship with museums, libraries and archives, including working with priority families.

- To develop understanding of the wider outcomes of family learning
- To develop planning and delivery of family learning with museums, libraries and archives which take account of public service agreement targets, national indicators and local area agreement priorities
- To develop strategies for evidencing outcomes.

Audience

- Staff from museums, libraries and archives
- Staff from the Family Learning sector.

The Museums, Libraries and Archive Council (MLA) and the National Institute of Adult Continuing Education (NIACE) have joined forces to develop new networks and training opportunities to build strong and sustainable partnerships between family learning practitioners and museums, libraries and archives at local level. By working together in this way we can create more family learning opportunities for more families.

NIACE, the National Institute of Adult Continuing Education, was founded in 1921. The National Institute seeks to secure an education system responsive to the diversity of adults' needs and aspirations as learners, and in particular to those who benefited least from initial education. It is our belief that a system fit for adults of all ages and in all their complexity will work better for all learners.

The National Institute is active in many areas - in research, development, publishing, seminars, conferences and training courses, and has an active individual membership.

NIACE is a company limited by guarantee.
