Supporting self organised learning – practical workshop

Friday 29 October 2010 (PM)

NIACE, Renaissance House, 20 Princess Road West, Leicester LE1 6TP

Background

This workshop will explore how clubs and groups can be supported to arrange their own learning activities. Learning activities come in many forms and one part of the rich mix is clubs and groups which run their own learning activities. These learning clubs and 'self organised' groups take many forms - from the well known and well-established such as the University of the Third Age to small local groups set up by friends and neighbours with a common interest. They may be music groups, book clubs, health or environmental groups, photographic or craft groups, motorcycle or walking clubs: what they all have in common is that people are coming together to enjoy learning new skills and activities.

Audience

This event will be of interest to those who support the development of informal learning groups, including:

- Outreach and development workers
- Staff in museums, libraries and archives services
- Staff in the health sector who support patient self-help groups
- Staff or members of faith groups
- Voluntary or community organisations involved in informal learning
- Providers of adult learning courses who support existing learners to set up their own self organised learning groups.

Aims

This workshop aims to:

- provide an opportunity for participants to share ideas on different approaches to supporting groups and clubs which plan their own learning
- introduce participants to resources which can help them and the groups that they support including how to find meeting spaces and how to get the best from technology.

Since publication of the 'Learning Revolution' White Paper there has been a growth in interest in learning groups and clubs which come in lots of shapes sizes and flavours. In the same way, the people who support clubs and groups come from a wide range of backgrounds so we hope that this workshop will also provide you with opportunities to network and to learn a lot from the experiences of others.

Clubs and groups offer just one way for adults to learn and in this workshop we will also explore how learners can move between self organised learning and more structured non-formal and formal learning.

NIACE, the National Institute of Adult Continuing Education, was founded in 1921. The National Institute seeks to secure an education system responsive to the diversity of adults' needs and aspirations as learners, and in particular to those who benefited least from initial education. It is our belief that a system fit for adults of all ages and in all their complexity will work better for all learners.

The National Institute is active in many areas - in research, development, publishing, seminars, conferences and training courses, and has an active individual membership.
